Scene from the film "The Last Shelter"

DOCFILM

The Last Shelter

A house at the gateway to the Sahara. It's the only place for migrants headed for Europe. But the building in the Malian city of Gao also offers sanctuary to those who've been forced to give up on their dream of reaching Europe and are on their way back home. It's a place where they can rest, get advice and be alerted to dangers. Like a fragile fortress, the house defies the desert that resounds with both dreams and nightmares. What do these people think and feel as they pass through this stark landscape? The documentary The Last Shelter seeks some answers.

If You Kill, Call Me

Their clients have names like El Chapo or La Reina del Pacifico. Their job: To represent the interests of drug lords. The focus of the documentary If You Kill, Call Me is the lawyers who work for drug cartels. The film sheds light on the clandestine world of these narco-lawyers. How do they use their legal expertise and connections to protect the interests of the cartels? What's their motivation? And what about their integrity? Lawyers in Mexico, Colombia and the US throw open a window on a ruthless reality.

THE 77 PERCENT

The Power of Music

As each African country faces its own political trials and tribulations, hip hop plays a pivotal role in voicing those struggles. The 77 Percent talks to hip hop duo P-Square in an exclusive interview, where they tell us about music in Nigeria during turbulent political times. What impact does music have on political activism? And how important it is to speak up for those that have no voice.

EUROMAXX

Falling in Love

It's the most expensive production to date at the Friedrichstadt-Palast: The Berlin revue theater is spending around 14 million Euros on its latest show "Falling in Love." The theater already has many superlatives to its name; including the world's longest line of showgirls and the world's largest stage. "Falling in Love" is being curated by none other than Parisian star designer Jean Paul Gaultier. Euromaxx looks behind the scenes of the revue business and experiences the challenges of rehearsals... as well as first-night nerves. Can this new show surpass the success of previous productions?

Cloud masses over the Amazon rainforest

DOCFILM

The Invisible River

It's an extraordinary phenomenon: The cloud masses above the Amazon rainforest contain more water than the Amazon itself. When these "flying rivers" hit the Andes, they're pushed south and rain down on the cities of South America. For more than 20 years, scientists have been trying to gain a better understanding of this system of water cycles in the atmosphere. A large-scale study from the Amazon to Siberia is investigating the rainforest's role in climate regulation – and the findings are astonishing. Find out more in the documentary The Invisible River that Flows through the Sky.

BUSINESS BEYOND

Exploring the Global Economy

Business Beyond offers deep dives into the most relevant cross-border business stories of today, guiding you through trade conflicts, supply chain challenges, and global labor issues. In the latest episode, Business Beyond explores Russia's replacements for Western brands that have abandoned the country. Are Russians enjoying CoolCola and Krunchy Dream as much as Coca-Cola and Krispy Kreme? Is their copycat McDonald's as good as the real thing? And will the Western firms that left begin a fight to protect their products? Business Beyond finds out with the help of a selection of international experts.

GLOBAL US

Globalization – What Is It Today?

Globalization is a controversial idea. On the one hand, it has pulled millions of people out of poverty. On the other, it's used by some wealthy people as a way to exploit the poor. Globalization can build bridges and promote peace. But it also foments populism, accelerates global warming and creates pandemics. So what does globalization mean today? Are we facing the end of globalization as we know it? And if that's the case, which globalization is coming to an end? And what does the future hold? Global Us goes in search of some answers.

Blackout in Germany?

The energy transition – one of the biggest challenges facing society and politics in Germany today. Germany wants green power from solar, wind, biomass and hydroelectric generation to account for 80 percent of its energy mix in just a few years. Is this realistic? Or could the country one day be facing a large-scale power blackout? And do political decision-makers have a plan to avert such a threat? Questions explored in the documentary Blackout in Germany – Horror Scenario or Genuine Possibility?.
