WQPT PBS was honored at the 2023 Mid-America Emmy Awards, taking home a prestigious Emmy in the Historical Documentary category for our locally written and produced documentary, Snapshots: Your Dutch Friend.

The documentary tells the story of how two young sisters, Juanita and Betty Wagner of Danville, Iowa, became pen pals with Anne Frank and her sister Margo, just as Nazi Germany occupied Amsterdam in 1940.

The Simon Wiesenthal Center, Los Angeles, currently owns the letters that united these four young girls. The Station Museum in Danville, Iowa, is the only remote location where the Wiesenthal Center allows copies of the original letters to be displayed.

This Emmy Award-winning documentary was written and produced by Lora Adams-Kopriva, recently retired WQPT PBS Director of Marketing and Local Content. “It’s important to recognize and acknowledge the documentary’s editor/videographer, Chris Ryder,” said Lora Adams, “Chris originally brought this story to my attention. We created this together.”

“I’m thrilled to see Lora and Chris recognized for their exceptional talent,” said Dawn Schmitt, WQPT PBS General Manager. “Congratulations to them for this well-deserved recognition of telling the stories of our region.”

WQPT PBS is honored to have been the PBS station to air other local documentaries that have also been nominated. Once WQPT PBS airs a film, the filmmaker can place that film for Emmy consideration. In addition to WQPT PBS, Fourth Wall Films (four-time Emmy winners with two nominations this year) and New Mile Media Arts also received Emmy nominations.

Helping Kids Learn to Take Turns & Practice Waiting

Whether with family at home or with peers at preschool or on a playdate, it’s important for children to learn how to take turns. Taking turns strengthens communication and creative problem solving skills and helps kids learn more about empathy and patience.

Here are helpful ways you can encourage children as they learn to wait, share and take turns:

Teach them to think flexibly and look for a solution. In the episode “Everyone Has a Turn at Show and Tell,” Daniel wants to use a green apron for show and tell, but O the Owl is already playing with it. Teacher Harriet asks them if they can find a way to both use it. O can use it right away while playing restaurant, and Daniel can have it when it’s time for show and tell since they don’t need it at the same time.

Practice communicating about taking turns. When at the park or a new friend’s house for the first time, taking turns in a new place can be tricky. Plus, there are new fun things to try! Practice beforehand, showing your child how to use their words when asking for a turn. Act out what happens if someone takes a long turn or doesn’t want to share. If your child thinks someone’s turn is taking too long, help them practice asking, “Can you take a shorter turn, please?”

Help them understand their feelings. Waiting is hard (even for grown-ups)! When your child wants something right away, or feels like someone else isn’t sharing when they should, talk about how that makes them feel. It can be frustrating to wait for a turn. When she’s teaching, Jaime Baker tells her class that, “It’s okay to be frustrated, but what can we do to make you not frustrated?” Working through big feelings with your kids helps them feel seen and understood while they wait.

Talk about what happens next. When Daniel and Prince Wednesday both want the pool noodle in the “Daniel Takes a Turn at the Pool” episode, Prince Wednesday’s mom makes it clear that it is Daniel’s turn now, but Prince Wednesday will get it next. Talking about what comes next can comfort your child and remind them who gets the next turn. In my family, this happens at the dinner table when both kids want to share about their day at the same time. I remind them whose turn it is to speak right now and who can share next so we can hear from everyone.

Find a way to play together. Daniel and Miss Elaina wants to play with bubbles at the pool, but Miss Elaina has them first. To find a way to play together, Daniel pops the bubbles while Miss Elaina makes them, then they switch roles. They play make believe with the bubbles and have fun together, further strengthening their friendship. (Taking turns like this also gave each person something else to do while they waited!)

Use clues kids can see. When one child wants something, but the other isn’t ready to be done, Jaime Baker recommends that young children show with their arms how long they will keep it. Though it’s not an exact measurement between arm lengths and minutes, it gives both kids a clue for how long it’ll be until the waiting child gets a turn. (You can also use a timer that shows a countdown for taking turns!)

Learning how to take turns and practice waiting is just one of the many social skills you can teach kids. For more tips, ideas for activities and much more, visit wqpt.org/parents
