Why Does Your Voice Matter?

As a public media viewer and listener, you know how valuable WQPT PBS is to the communities we serve.

Federal funding, which amounts to about $1.60 per person annually, makes public media possible. The investment directly supports local stations like WQPT PBS—enabling us and other stations to provide you with essential programs and services.

If federal funding is eliminated, WQPT PBS could be forced to cut hallmark educational content, important public safety communications during natural disasters, professional development and resources for teachers, music and cultural programming, unparalleled local content and documentaries like Wharton, More Than Monopoly and Your Dutch Friend, and much more. Some stations could even be forced off the air.

Join Protect My Public Media's action network to protect stations like WQPT PBS, and NPR stations like Tri-States Public Radio and WVIK.
